

The new pilgrims office that has been so much talked about is now open. Today was their first day.

Since it is still "winter season" they have opened a smaller office in the lower part of the complex. The larger office (with 13-14 staff writing compostelas at once) will open later, most likely around Easter.

The entrance to this "winter office" is around the corner and in the car entrance that goes right into the garden.

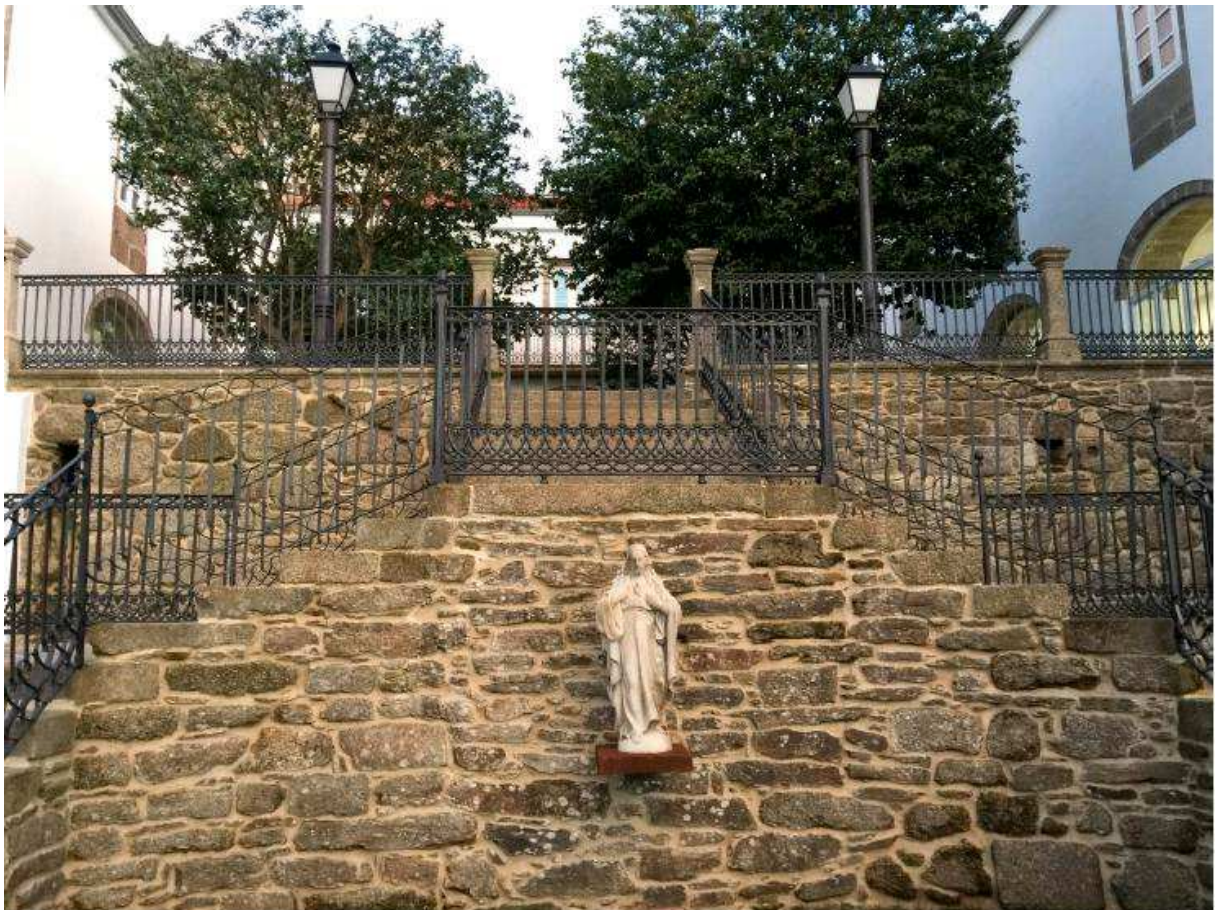

This is inside the new smaller "winter office":

This is the garden:
(Yes, those are grape wines)

The steps up to the main building (and the summer pilgrims office):

I was given a tour of the whole installation, but was asked not to publish photos until they had it all ready. It was spectacular. Buen Camino! Ivar